Observations of the Sunnes rising.

In the fifth Columne of this mine Almanacke, you haue the true time of the Sunne rising in houres and minutes for euery day throughout the yeere; Now the houres and minutes of Sunne rising for any day being substracted from twelue leaueth the true houre and minute of Sunne setting for that day. And if you double the houre of Sunne setting for any day, it sheweth you the iust length of the same day; and the time of Sunne rising being doubled, giueth you the iust length of the night going before, from Sunne setting.

One Example will make all plain. The first of May the Sunne riseth 23. minutes after foure of the clocke which substracted from twelue leaueth seuen houres and 37. minut. for the houre of Sunne setting. Now seuen 37. minut. being doubled make fiftene houres and fourteene minut. which is the length or space of time betweene Sunne rising and Sunne setting for that day. But the houre of Sunne rising, viz. foure houres, 23. minut. being doubled sheweth the length of the night before going to be eight houres, and 46. minutes.

Note that the golden Planet Venus is Orientall from the beginning of this yeere vnto the fiftenth day of September, at which time shee beginneth to be Occidentall, and so continueth all the rest of this yeere. All the while that shee is Orientall, shee riseth in the morning, before the Sunne, and is called Lucifer, or our bright morning Starre. But while shee is Occidentall, shee setteth after the Sunne at night, and is called Vesper, or our glittering euening Starre.
